FRIDAY MOS NING, MARCH 22, 1861.

An Amendment to the Constitution. Gov. Morgan yesterday transmitted to the Legislature the joint resolution adopted by Congress at its late session, proposing to the several State Legislatures an article amendatory to the Constitution, providing that no amendment shall be made thereafter which shall give to Congress power to abelish or interfere with the institution of slavery in any state within which it may exist. In transmitting the joint resolution, Governor Mongas makes an earnest appeal to the Legislature to adept it.

The proposed amendment, he says, commends itself to the judgment while it conforms to the sentiment of the people of this state, who have always adhered to the doctrine of the right of the states respectively to control their domestic institutions in such manner as they may judge most conducive to their prosperity and happiness. He further thinks that the border states would accept such an amendment to the Constitution as the resolution proposes, as an earnest of the honest desire of the northern states to preserve for them for all time their Constitutional rights.

We sincere y hope that the conciliatory and conservative spirit of the Governor's communication will be heartily responded to by our State Legislature. The great object of the joint resolution and of the Constitutional amendment which itproposes, is to calm apprehension in the border slave states, and to convince them that though the people of the Northern States are opposed to the institution of slavery and would not re-establish it among themselves, they entertain no design, and would not use any power they might possess to interfere with the institution in the states where it exists, for its injury or abolition.

But the adoption of the amendment by the Legislatures of the Northern states, would not only, in all probability, keep the border states firmly attached to the Union, but it would be a public and gractical refutation of the misrepresentation so artfully and wickedly used by the secession conscirators, that the northern people are all abolitionists and are only awaiting the opportunity and the possession of the power, to invade the rights of the southern states, destroy their domestic institutions and involve them in irreparable rain. It would revive the spirit and strengthen the cause of the union men in the secoled states, who have for the time been borne down and puralyzed by the sudden violence and daring tresson of the disunionists. And might we not hope that it would also be the means of reuniting the broken links in the chain of interest, friendship and national pride which has so long bound us together as one people, having a common name and a common destiny?

Another U. S. Jadge on Treason.

At the opening of the United States District Cou.t in Besten en the 19th inst., Judge SPRAGUE, in charging the Grand Jury, defined the law of treason, and the various punishable offences against the General Government. The idea that the Government of the United States is a mere confederacy be repudiated as a fundamental and dangerous error. The Coastitution established a government with the highest attributes of sovereignty. To attempt to subvert its authority is rebellion, and to "levy war" against it is treason. But he held tha in "levying war" there must be a military as semblage to undertake hostilities, not a mere conspiracy, however atrocious it might be.

The sudden outbreak of a mob would not amount to treason, as such bodies do not contemplate continuous and concerted action. A treasonable purpose, however, exists, whenever the deliberate object is to prevent by force the execution of any one law, as this is overthrow. ing the government to that extent. To take ession of forts, arsenals or other property of the United States, is a flugrant act of "levying war," and consequently treasonable. It is also treasonable to be in league with those who are levying war, and any person, a citizen of the United States, who sends them money, provisions, arms or intelligence for the purpose of aiding them, is a traitor, n matter how far distant he may be.

The Judge then proceeded to argue the supre macy of the national authority in and throughout the Union. He said that it has been at a fermer period, and is now, a momentous question, whether under our complex system there is any power extrinsic to that of the National Government by which its powers can be rightfully resisted, or their obligations impaired. There is no such power.

Tre authority of the United States within The authority of the United States within their spikere is supreme. This is a vital principle. It was so regarded by the formers of the Condition, and they have secured it in the most explicit and emphatic terms. This Constitution and the laws made pursuant thereto, shall be the supreme law of the land. And to be derived all only provided that the Government which they created should be the first judge of the except of its own laws. And this end they established a Judge's Department as a contribute large for of the Government. To say this end they established a J d clas Department as a coordinate branch of the Government, to axpound at d ecforce the provisions of the Goodhutton and theacts of Congress. Ner is talk with Lorder trust the lowest five United Sever should be practicity as well as theoretically currents, tary created as Ex cultive Department, clothed withfull power to ecforce the lowes. And thus a Government paramount in all its departments was established.

After showing that the Constitution and laws made under it by Coogress, cannot be overridden by state laws, he thus brings his argument to bear on the question of secession ;

The ciseff etechand if remains and in various sections of the U in have expressly sought for some lipsl some of resums legal are authority. But it has been not a Toere is no such ano not

But it has been to voice. There is no such ano action middle or that is tween submission, and rebelier; and this less take e. has at length been resched. Sension is but double name for resolution; for the value of each for a constitutional right to everthrow the Construction and a legal right to destroy all law.

It is often add that the Constitution destroys the formest only that a Salabase pointed body, to rect to be compelled to executions laws of that U it distances, it is true, because there have a directly upon individually, and are not to be a forced by Salabase and the submission of the U it distances, it is true, because there have a directly upon individually, and are not to be a forced by Salabash and the more Confederacy.

But a revelution, says the Intelligencer, has been effected, and a Provisional Government stablished, and with these facts the United States Government have to deal. The Intelligencer then proceeds to state its opposition to coercive measures, and to show that whatever may be the theoretical duty of the President under the Constitution, he is virtually without the power, even if it were wise policy, to retake the forts and other property select by the revolutionists or to collect the revenues at the ports of the secodel states. After making various suggestions, and urging forbe trance until the real sentiments of the southern people are known beyond question, the Istelligencer thus thanks to the clerk of the weather, the "loves of bonnets," t gether with the pretty commendations they were to receive, remain as yet unseen and unheard. What a disappointment for the girls of Broadway, D.visien and Canal strests. Slushy, raining and snowing during the day, and in the evening the pavements cased with ice, few ventured abroad who wore not forerd to do so. Stages and rail cars were well patronized, and amusetrents suffered. Stage drivers, by the by, who may be surposed to have their dispositions warped by the customary uppleasant curvature of the spine they suffer in intersource with their fellow mortale, have invented a trick which is certainly the cause of much "strong language." This is to hold tightly the door strap when a victim in: 'e wishes to stop, until the unsuspecting party is pushing the atoutest against it, and then suddenly letting loose, precipitating him into the mud. Who could "speak gently" then?
